Forest Rights in India

by

Ms. Kanchi Kohli

Kanchi Kohli is a researcher, writer, and campaigner working on environment, forest and biodiversity governance in India and their interface with trade and industrialization. She serves as a senior researcher at the Centre for Policy Research (CPR). Her work explores the links between law, industrialization and environment justice. She seeks to draw empirical evidence from sites of conflict and locates it within the legal and policy processes. She has authored several publications and popular articles, including the book Business Interests and the Environmental Crisis (SAGE, 2016)"
