Parting Words.....

(From the editor)

Shakespeare said, "Parting is such a sweet sorrow"..... really? I don't think so. It has been such a beautiful time here in the environs of PPS that it is almost impossible to put across departure as sweet.

It is always really difficult to part with something you have spent so much time with, for me, for us, for our batch, it will be a totally different experience going through this. In this little world of ours, we played, we learned, we made mistakes, we corrected them, we danced, we jumped and now suddenly, poof! The hammer of reality is about to strike us right in the head. Are we ready? Of course, we are. Personally for me my joining the school in 2013 was a watershed event in my life as after that I've only grown to become better and better in every way, I learnt manners, I learnt to be physically fit, I learnt chivalry, I learnt truck loads of things and tried to return the favor to the school in every possible way (I still owe a lot to this institution). Being a part of this newsletter was again a learning experience which puffed me with leadership skills. Eagle's Eyrie is also special for me as it is an initiative which took shape only because of its mentor's efforts and some students which included me as well. The special issues during J.K.Kate and The Founder's were the outcome of great hard work by the team. The interviews were fun, the write ups were witty and all this because of the tough grind of the mentor as well as the students.

I want to thank and acknowledge each and every single soul in the vicinity of the campus for doing what they are doing, right from the top to the very bottom of the hierarchy. As they say, every ending has a new beginning and the baton has to be passed on, this is the editor signing off, so long.

IN RUBARU WITH

MR. MOHIT JOSHI

Q. How is it that you're always smiling and joking?

A. I feel that life is not a CD player, we should not repeat the same things over and over again. Life should be like a Radio, every time something different. I just stick to this philosophy and I am this way.

Q. You're an open book but is there something that no one knows about you?

A. Umm....Yes I like travelling, I want to tour the whole world someday.

Q. If not a teacher what would have been your profession?

A. I always wanted to become a Doctor.

Q. Your comments on the title bestowed upon you in the teachers day edition.

A. 'Jolly Maskara' right? I felt really happy and I acknowledged the title, I am not bragging about myself but I think the title is because of my Radio and CD player Philosophy.

Q. The fondest memory of your life at PPS till date?

A. It was when I was commissioned as the ANO, NCC in 2008 after a memorable training at The Southern Naval Command, Cochin.

Q. What's special about our batch (ISC 2017)?

A. " Chhota Parivaar, Sukhi Parivaar." I would say.

Rapid Fire-

Favourite Song- Musafir hoo yaaro

Favourite Food- Beans Paneer

Eagle's Eyrie- What's That? (laughs) just joking, A Ready Reckoner.

Demonetisation- Turned 90% of the Indians into PhDs in Finance and Monetary Economics. Everyone's talking about it yaar.

" I really want to wish the outgoing class XII best of luck for their lives and I want to tell them that I love them all.

There's a lot of difference between love and like, if you like a flower you will pluck it but if you love a flower you will water it. I again say, I LOVE YOU ALL BACHHO! "

To all the Cheerful Canines.....!

Reading the heart-touching story of a dog named Malu, who followed a pilgrim for 600 km journey, I couldn't refrain myself from writing and dedicating this blog about my ever growing love for canines. My love for dogs know no boundaries, as it's simply not restricted to the Dachshunds, Beagles, Poms or Germans.... rather it is an extra mile for my mongrels and stray dogs who fill the vacuum with their aura of friendliness.

The eagerness with which they greet you is unparalleled to any species in the world. The contentment of purely feeding them with small morsels of food can't be put across in any words. Their wet nose, the marks left by their paws, their furry tails give me sheer joy and I am convinced that these four legged species need us more than our fellow species (humans) need us.

I am quite sure that dogs are better role models for us rather than we, the humans setting examples for each other. Don't they love us unconditional and selfless, which is unlike of human beings. Canines don't expect anything in return. They forgive and forget their masters even if they have been left alone for long time, unattended. We, humans take pride in holding grudges against each other and eventually become retaliating in nature. Canines spread love, warmth, loyalty everywhere. Dog lovers will agree with me. (Non-dog lovers must check out those puppy eyes oozing with love).

Animals have a more and strong sense of belongingness in their eyes. Observing them takes away your exhaustion at the end of the day. My dear dogs cannot speak, yet they have the most powerful expressive eyes. Any idea of what they wish to convey ??? Well...I have been able to make out that all they ask us to do is to spread love and be kind and humane.....

We may be educated but truly lack the values of being a good human being. Observe these beautiful creatures around us for few moments and you will understand that there is somebody who needs you.
