

Examples of the wording of the research objective

Explore the names of the streets of our village and show street sights.

Study of the history and role of the city in the history of the country on its eastern frontiers.

Investigate the importance of plastic bottles in human life and nature.

To study the problem of social orphanhood and how, in particular, these issues are solved in our area.

To study the problem of the appearance of social orphanhood.

To study the conditions of the Center for Social Assistance to the Family and Children of our city, where children are social orphans.

To study such economic phenomena as inflation and deflation.

The study of food additives in food and their impact on human health.

Identify patterns of phenomena ...

Determining the causes of poor posture in adolescent children.

Find out why the eagle is depicted on the coat of arms of USA.

Learn what the sun and show its value in human life.

To analyze the main methods and mechanisms for solving problems of orphans and children left without parental care by the state.

Show a reflection of the historical events of the country in the works of my great-grandfather.

To get acquainted with the history of the development of the city, its inhabitants, traditions, because every year it becomes less and less inhabitants.

Tasks of research

To determine the objectives of the research work, you need to consistently answer the question: "What should I do to achieve the goal of the research?"

Tasks are recorded in the Introduction of research work immediately after the goal.

100% U.S. Paper Writing Service

Usually the tasks of a research project are listed and begin with the words: find out, study, conduct, learn, analyze, research, determine, review, find, propose, identify, measure, compare, show, assemble, make, compose, synthesize, describe, establish, develop, meet, etc.